

Privacy Statement

Braille2000, LLC is a Nebraska Limited Liability Company and like all companies maintains private customer data to conduct business. This information is never accessed on-line. Braille2000 maintains an Internet web site at www.braille2000.com that is one-way broadcast-only supplying information and digital resources not particularized to any one person. There is no site “login” mechanism and the site does not solicit any personal data.

The Braille2000 Software uses the Internet to connect to our server for the following purposes:

- a. To manage Internet-based right-to-use licenses
- b. To receive occasional announcements
- c. To download new software
- d. To transmit data (message text and/or files) between Software users

No user-identifying information is collected or used in these functions. No user behavior tracking is done and no advertising is conducted. All user work-products reside where the user places them (nothing is automatically stored in the “cloud”). A user may choose to place the user’s name in a public-to-the-Software “address book” for use by (d). A user may choose to place personal information in message text handled by (d), but only with limited expectations of privacy. Such usage is totally at the discretion of the user and not dictated by or encouraged by Braille2000.

The Software may, from time to time, refer the user to a user-specific license renewal web page that can solicit a fee by using the services of PayPal.com. The privacy of that transaction is handled totally by PayPal.com.